\(^1\) Indicators are realistic and measurable criteria of project progress. They should be defined before the project starts and allow us to monitor or evaluate whether a project does what it said it would do. Indicators can be classified as follows: (1) Quantitative Indicators (e.g., the number of people attending a training); (2) Qualitative Indicators (e.g., outcome / performance Indicators).
Please explain how will you reach women, youth, and others underrepresented\(^2\) groups of persons with disabilities?

Please explain if and how the project will entail partnership/collaborations with organizations of persons with disabilities (OPDs) and other stakeholders in the country/or in the region.

5. Capacity

Please describe the team who will work on this project (staff, volunteers, board)?

\(^2\) The International Disability Alliance understands the term “under-represented groups” to be those among persons with disabilities who enjoy less visibility in decision making processes. The disability movement, like other social movements, is not homogenous. There are some groups that have traditionally been less included in participatory processes, or harder to reach, or face higher barriers to participation such as: persons who are deafblind, persons with intellectual disabilities, persons with psychosocial disabilities, persons with autism, hard of hearing people or deaf people. It can also include those who may be less engaged in decision making such as women, children, young, older people and indigenous persons, as well as people from diverse faith, ethnicity, caste, class, sexual orientation or gender identity minorities. This understanding may differ in different countries, culture and contexts.
In your opinion, what are the main challenges and risks your organization will face in implementing this project?

What kind of skills and support do you think you need for your project work?
